PUBLIC GOVERNANCE COMMITTEE

OECD Webinar: “Public Procurement responses to the COVID-19: Lessons and experiences from countries”

Agenda

ZOOM WEBINAR

This webinar will provide an overview of the strategies and measures taken by OECD countries, such as Ireland, Korea, Italy, Germany, New Zealand and Australia to respond to the extremely urgent needs of their citizens during the first phase of the COVID-19 crisis.

The panel will reflect on the need for a more strategic use of collaborative purchasing approaches and centralisation during a worldwide pandemic.

Panellists will also discuss the new experimental ways governments used for engaging with the market to find innovative solutions for their needs and to mitigate risks of the disruptive supply chains.

OECD Webinar: “Public Procurement responses to the COVID-19: Lessons and experiences from countries”

4 June 2020
Virtual Meeting

09:30 – 09:40      OPENING REMARKS

- Mr. John Ivil, Chair of the Working Party of Leading Practitioners on Public Procurement

09:40 – 09:50      KEYNOTE ADDRESS

- Ms. Marzena Rogalska, Director, Directorate for Single Market for Public Administrations, DG Internal Market, Industry, Entrepreneurship and SMEs (DG GROW), European Commission

09:50 – 09:55      IT IS TIME TO HEAR FROM YOU: polling questions and results

09:55 – 10:40      PANEL: Innovative collaborative purchasing approaches for joining forces against the COVID-19 pandemic

Public procurement is at the frontline of countries' responses to the COVID-19 outbreak. The pandemic, however, has created a radically new purchasing environment with fierce competition between public buyers for the same vital products and services, serious disruptions in supply chains, unexpected market responses, price inflation as demand across the globe far exceeds supply, and higher risks for counterfeit products, to name just a few. These new challenges require adaptive policy responses and new alliances. Amongst the various immediate measures taken by countries throughout OECD and beyond, collaborative and co-operative purchasing approaches on supra-national, national and regional levels have proven to be effective to procure critical items and to join forces against the COVID-19 pandemic while avoiding sending competing messages to the market.

The panel will provide an overview of the strategies and measures taken by OECD countries, such as Ireland, Korea, Italy, Germany, New Zealand and Australia, to respond to the extremely urgent needs of their citizens during the first phase of the COVID-19 crisis. The panel will reflect upon the need for a more strategic use of collaborative purchasing approaches and centralisation during a worldwide pandemic. Panellists will also discuss the new experimental ways governments are engaging with the market to find innovative solutions for their needs and to mitigate risks of the disruptive supply chains.

Questions that will be discussed include:

- What have been the main challenges faced by governments in purchasing the vital products during the first phase of the COVID-19 crisis?

- What strategies and institutional responses were introduced to address these immediate challenges and therefore ensure the availability of vital health products and the continuity of public service provision?
- What are the experiences of co-ordinated and collaborative actions applied at national and regional levels during the crisis in terms of mitigating the risks associated with emergency contracting?
- Are there any examples of how to unleash the potential of engaging with industry for purchasing alternative and innovative products?
- What are the main lessons learnt in terms of co-ordination, collaboration for the post COVID-19 period?

Panellists:

- Ms. Karen English, Director of International Procurement and Trade, Ministry of Business, Innovation and Employment, New Zealand
- Mr. Paul Quinn, Government CPO and CEO, Office of Government Procurement, Ireland
- Ms. Angela Russo, Consip, Italy
