THIRD ANNUAL MEETING ON PUBLIC PRIVATE PARTNERSHIPS
OECD CONFERENCE CENTER, PARIS, 12-13 APRIL 2010

DRAFT ANNOTATED AGENDA

1. The financial crisis and the use of PPPs (April 12th)

The financial crisis had an immediate negative impact on the volume of PPP projects in member countries. As credit markets dried up, debt capital became next to impossible to secure by SPVs and new projects that had not already been finalised largely came to a standstill. In response to these developments a number of countries made efforts to unclog the PPP pipeline by making financing available in various forms. The UK chose to do so by setting up a unit within the Treasury that acts like a private-sector bank, the Infrastructure Finance Unit. France, Portugal chose to set up a guarantee scheme and other countries such as Mexico and Korea set up special PPP initiatives as part of their fiscal stimulus plans.

This session will have a broad discussion of what consequences the financial crisis had for PPPs, what remedial actions were put in place by governments, how they worked and what developments can be expected.

Speakers:

1. Constantinos Herodotou, Executive Director, UBS
2. Ben Clements, Division chief for the Expenditure Policy Division, IMF Fiscal Affairs Department
3. Nicholas Jennett, Head European PPP Expertise Centre (EPEC), European Investment Bank
4. François Bergere, Secrétaire Général, Mission d'Appui aux PPP, Ministère Economie Industrie et Emploi, France
5. Charles Lloyd, Head of Corporate and Private Finance at UK Treasury
6. Jay-Hyung Kim, Managing Director, Public and Private Infrastructure Investment Management Center, Korea

2. Ensuring value for money when choosing between PPPs and traditional public procurement – towards OECD good practise principles? (April 12th)

Often the procedural, institutional and legal requirements of traditional infrastructure public procurement (Build-and-Deliver) and the procurement of services through Public-Private Partnerships (PPPs) differ. Whereas in principle value-for-money constitutes the decisive element in deciding between the two methods of procurement, the differences in requirements may skew the choice by creating an incentive to prefer one type of procurement to the other. In turn, this may cause value for money not to be the decisive criterion in the choice between methods of procurement. With the focus on attaining value for money, this questionnaire will collect information on traditional infrastructure public procurement and the procurement of services through Public-Private Partnerships with the intention of suggesting good practice aligning the requirements for these two types of procurement and removing possible perverse incentives that favour one over the other.

Delegates will be asked to comment on whether an attempt to synthesize the guidelines into an “OECD Countries Good Practise Guidelines for the procurement of PPPs” would be helpful.

Speakers:

1. Ian Hawkesworth and Philippe Burger from OECD Secretariat presents paper comparing PPP and traditional procurement processes in member countries
2. Borja Gari, Deputy Managing Director, Acciona Concesiones, “Comparing procurement rules in selected OECD countries, the private sector view”
3. François Bergere, Secrétaire Général, Mission d'Appui aux PPP, Ministère Economie Industrie et Emploi, France
4. Edward Humpherson, Assistant Auditor General at NAO
5. Danny Graham, Director, Private Projects Branch of New South Wales Treasury
6. Charles Lloyd, Head of Corporate and Private Finance at UK Treasury

3. The use of PPPs for infrastructure investments in urban areas (April 13th)

Several large scale urban infrastructure projects in a number of OECD countries have been financed using PPPs, in order to strengthen the competitiveness and growth of major cities. These projects have in many cases involved the national and sub national government, as well as private partners, and can substantially reshape the dynamics of a city. Other infrastructure projects and programmes have been recognised as having the potential to transform the social face of a community.

This session will discuss what lessons can be learnt when using the PPP model by way of a number of case studies presented by experts involved in the actual projects. The session is and run in corporation with the GOV Directorate’s Regional Competitiveness and Governance Division.

Speakers:

1. Hélène de Largentaye, Councillor for Sustainable Development, The City of Paris, France
2. Tim Byles, CEO Partnerships for Schools, UK
3. Ivan Costermans, CFO BAM, Antwerp, Belgium
4. TUAC, The Trade Union Advisory Committee to the OECD
5. Danny Graham, Director, Private Projects Branch of New South Wales Treasury
6. Luciano Greco, Professor, University of Padova, Italy
